LONDON, SATURDAY, November 10, 1733. NUMB. CXCII.

BEFORE we begin our Examen of the Inside of St. Paul's, it will not be amiss to cast an Eye on the Statue in the Area before it, erected in Honour of the late Queen. It stands exactly in the Front of the Building, tho' it seems, by the odd Situation of Ludgate-street, to be on one-Side, and is, upon the Whole, modeli'd in a tolerable Taste, and executed as well: The principal Figure indeed, the Queen herself, is an Exception to this Character; such a formal, gothique Habit, and stiff, affected Attitude, are neither to be endur'd, or pardon'd; and there is not one of those round the Base that does not justly deserve the Preference.

Whoever understands the Nature of publick ornamental Buildings critically, always lays it down for a Rule, That they cannot be too expensive, or magnificent; for which Reason St. Paul's is so far from being admir'd for being so grand and august as it is, that nothing is more common than to hear it censur'd for not being more so. Every Body knows that the Fund, which rais'd it from its Ruins to its present Glory, was equal to any Design of Beauty or Majesty; and, as those who had it in Trust, went so far towards this necessary End, 'tis a thousand Pities they did not carry it on much farther, and make this Pile not only the Ornament of Britain, but the Admiration and Envy of all Europe. St. Peter's at Rome was already built; a Model which the most finish'd Architect need not have been asham'd to imitate, and, as all its particular Beauties have been long publickly known and admir'd, I think it was incumbent on us to have equall'd it at least; and, if we had excell'd it too, 'twould have been no more than might have been reasonably expected from such a Nation as ours, and such a Genius as Wren.

On these Principles it is, that Men of Taste and Understanding are surpriz'd, at entring this Church, to see so many Faults, and miss so many Beauties: They discover at once that it wants Elevation to give it a proportionable Grandeur, and Length to assist the Perspective: That the Columns are heavy and clumsy to a prodigious Degree, and rather incumber the Prospect, than enrich it with Symmetry and Beauty: Half the necessary Breaks of Light and Shadow are hereby wanting, and half the Perspective in general cut off: At the same Time I don't deny but many Parts of the Decoration are exceedingly grand and noble, and demand very justly a sincere Applause. The Dome is, without Question, a very stupendous Fabrick, and strikes the Eye with an astonishing Pleasure: 'Tis, indeed, one of those happy Kinds of Building that please all People alike, from the most ignorant Clown, up to the most accomplish'd Gentleman: But yet, even here the Judge cannot help taking Notice that it bears no Proportion to the rest of the Building, and that, after you have seen this, you can look at no other Part of it; whereas a judicious Builder would husband his Imagination, and still have something in Reserve to delight the Mind, though nothing perhaps could be contriv'd to surprize after it.

For Example, the very Nature of the Choir would not admit of any Thing so marvellous as the Dome, yet it might have reliev'd the Eye with something equivalently beautiful; the Entrance in Front might have been more noble and uniform; either compos'd of Wood intirely, or Marble; for the present Mixture of both makes a disagreeable Piece of Patch-work, that rather disgusts than entertains: The Opening, on the Inside, through the present beautiful Range of Stalls, might have terminated in a much more magnificent Alcove, than we see there at present, adorn'd with all the Elegance and Profusion of Decoration: The Altar should have been rais'd of the richest Marble, in the most expensive Taste; that it might have been of a Piece with the rest of the Church, and terminated the View of the Whole, with all the Graces of the most luxuriant Imagination. All the intermediate Spaces should have been fill'd up with the noblest historical Paintings; all the Majesty of Frize-Work, Cornices, and Carving, heighten'd with the most costly Gildings, should have been lavish'd to adorn it; and one grand Flow of magnificent Curtain depended from the Windows to finish and adorn the same.

Thus have I been free enough to give my impartial Opinion of St. Paul's; I hope not too presumptuously, and if ignorantly, let every Reader's private Judgment set me right.

Fond as I am of Gates, and indeed all Sorts of Building that may be made publick Ornaments, I can't help wishing that Ludgate was intirely demolish'd; for, at present, it only serves to hide St. Paul's, which would be a far nobler Termination of the Street, and actually wants a proper Point of View to survey it to Advantage.

I own myself much pleas'd with the late Design of filling up Fleet-Ditch; 'twill be turning a Nuisance into an Ornament; no Place about London may be made a finer Street, or is better situated for publick Regards.

The Steeple of St. Bride's, at first Sight, appears to a good deal of Advantage; but on ever so slight an Examination, we conclude it wants Variety, and the first and last Order are almost the same.

St. Andrew's, Holborn, has the Advantage of a very good Situation, but then it deserves as little as any modern Church in the whole City. The Tower is even below Criticism, but the Inside of the Building makes Amends for the Awkwardness of the Out; and is really as neat, and well-finish'd, as the Manner and Taste it is form'd in will allow.

St. Dunstan's in Fleet-street is but an Incumbrance to the Way; without having any Thing but Deformity itself, it spoils the Beauty of the whole Street, and hides the Prospect of Temple-Bar, which would terminate the View very advantageously, and be seen almost as far again as it is at present. Temple-Bar is indeed the handsomest Gate about Town, and deserves some Degree of Applause: If it has any Fault, 'tis this, that, the Top being round as well as the Arch underneath, the Whole wants that Contraste of Figure which is so essential to Beauty and Taste. The Statues, on the Out-side, are good; their only Disadvantage is the Hurry of the Place where they are to be view'd, which makes it dangerous to be curious; and prevents the Attention to them, which they would otherwise command.

The Structure of the Temple-Gate is in the Stile of Inigo Jones, and very far from inelegant; I wish I could say the same of the different Detachments of Building which belong to it: But that is far from being in my Power, nor ever can, or will: The Property is so divided, and sub-divided, that 'tis next to impossible that any Agreement should ever be made in favour of Harmony and Decoration. 'Tis certain nothing can be finer situated than the Temple, along the Side of the River, and, if we consider the Elevation of the Ground, and how far it extends, the most barren Invention can't fail of conceiving the Uses it might be put to, and the Beauties it would admit of. At present there is but one Thing which is worth observing in the Temple, and that is the old Church which belong'd to the Knights Templars of Jerusalem; and the Out-side even of this is cover'd from the View, that the Whole might be of a Piece. The In-side, indeed, is yet visible, and may justly be esteem'd one of the best Remains of gothique Architecture in this City. The Form of it is very singular; you enter first into a large circular Tower, which, a-top, terminates in something like a Dome, and has a very good Effect on the Eye; beyond, opposite to the Entrance, the Church extends itself in three Isles, and is built and finish'd with as much Elegancy and Proportion as the Taste of those Days would allow.

From the Temple 'tis but a natural Step to Lincoln's-Inn; but, by the Way, 'tis worth a Stranger's Curiosity to visit the Habitation of the Master of the Rolls; which is certainly built with Elegancy and Convenience, and can be blam'd in nothing but its Situation; which is undoubtedly as bad, as the Building itself is good.

Lincoln's-Inn may reasonably boast of one of the neatest Squares in Town; and, tho' it is imperfect on one Side, yet that very Defect produces a Beauty, by giving a Prospect to the Gardens, which fill the Space to abundantly more Advantage. I may safely add, that no Area, any where, is kept in better Order, either for Cleanliness and Beauty by Day, or Illumination and Decorum by Night: The Fountain in the Middle is a very pretty Decoration, and, if it was still kept playing, as it was some Years ago, 'twould preserve its Name with more Propriety, and give greater Pleasure into the Bargain.

The Out-side of the Chapel, belonging to this Society, is a very good Piece of gothique Architecture, and the Painting on the Windows has a great many Admirers within: In my Opinion, indeed, it does not deserve quite so much Applause as it has receiv'd: because the Designs are poor, the Faces have little Expression, and there is little Reason, beside a blind Regard to Antiquity, to extol them at all. The raising the Chapel on Pillars, affords a pleasing, melancholy Walk underneath, and by Night, particularly, when, illuminated by the Lamps, it has an Effect that may be felt, but not describ'd.

The Gardens are far from being admirable, but then they are convenient; and, considering their Situation, cannot be esteem'd too much. There is something hospitable too, in laying them open to publick Use; and while we share in their Pleasures, we have no Title to arraign their Taste.

On Saturday last the Servant Maid that served Cornel de Roman at Paddington, was ordered from New-Prison, to be examined a third Time before Justice Deveil, and she still utterly denied the Fact; whereupon the Justice gave Orders that she should change her Lodgings, and sent her to the Gatehouse, till a farther Examination. What is further to be observed of this Woman, the last three Places she lived in, every House was robbed during her Servitude.

The same Day Roades stood on the Pillory at Charing-Cross, pursuant to his Sentence last Sessions, for uttering false Money, where he met with a favourable Reception; for not one Person lifted up a Hand to throw any Thing at him, by Reason the High Constable of Westminster got on the Pillory, and told the Populace, that pelting the

(his Father being intended for that Honour, but by a fatal Accident got his Death) in Opposition to Sir Rowland Wynne, Bart. who stands on the Court Interest.

There was publick Notice given about a Month ago for the Gentlemen of Essex to meet at Chelmsford upon the 3d Instant, to agree upon Members to represent the County. Sir Robert Abdy was first proposed, upon which there appeared so general an Agreement, that a Motion was made for a Recess. Sir Thompson was named, who desired to decline it, tho' the Voices for him were unanimous. Sir Henry Mainard was proposed, and after him the Lord Castlemayne, Son of the Earl of Tilney. Sir Robert Abdy and his Friends withdrew, and the Company came to no Resolution which of the other two to set up. Then Mr. Honywood was named, but the Gentlemen parted without resolving upon any Thing farther; however a great Majority of the Persons present being for Mr. Brampston, it is thought he will be prevail'd on to stand with their present worthy Member, Sir Robert Abdy, Bart. on the Country Interest.

At a Meeting lately at the Swan Tavern in Cornhill, of above an hundred substantial worthy Citizens of London, Freeholders of the County of Kent, the Right Hon. the Lord Vane, and Sir Edward Deering, Bart. were entertain'd in a handsome and elegant Manner by the said Freeholders, who being glad of the Opportunity of seeing their two Candidates in Town, unanimously agreed (tho' contrary to modern Custom) not to suffer them to pay any Part of the Expence.

TUESDAY, Nov. 6.

We hear that her Grace the Dutchess Dowager of Marlborough has endow'd the Alms-Houses at St. Alban's, lately built by her Grace, for decay'd Families of that Town, together with the School built for the Education of several poor Boys and Girls, and afterwards to be put out Apprentice, with the Sum of 1500 l. per Annum for ever; and that the Mayor and Burgesses of the said Corporation waited on her Grace when she was there to view the said Alms-Houses at the Mayor's Feast, and return'd her hearty Thanks for the Honour she had done to the said Town, and withal signify'd to her Grace, that whoever she recommended to represent them in Parliament they would chuse; and her Grace recommended her Grandson, the Hon. John Spencer, Esq; for one, and did not oppose their nominating Mr. Astry for the other.

On Saturday Night last a Proclamation was publish'd, proroguing the Parliament from the 15th of this Instant November (to which Day it now stands prorogued) to Thursday the 17th Day of January next, and then to sit for the Dispatch of divers weighty and important Affairs.

Yesterday came on at St. George's Vestry, Hanover-Square, before Sir Thomas Clarges, Bart. and other of his Majesty's Justices of the Peace, the Hearing upon the Summons issued against two of the Players of the Haymarket, and two of Goodman's-Fields, as Vagrants within the Statute of the 12*th of Queen* Anne. Mr. Marsh and Mr. Gill were of Counsel for Mr. Rich, Mr. Highmore, and the Patentees of Drury-Lane and Covent Garden; Mr. Serjeant Eyre, Mr. Strange, and Mr. Edward Bootle, for Mr. Mills and Company; and Mr. Serjeant Darnell, Mr. Wynne, and Mr. Dennison, for Mr. Giffard's Company; when after Mr. Marsh had open'd the Complaint, Mr. Strange mov'd on the Behalf of his Clients, that as that Hearing would not be decisive, but might be remov'd, and that no Time might be lost, he propos'd that an Action on a feign'd Issue might be try'd the Sittings after this Term, whether they were Vagrants, &c. within that Act: Mr. Marsh did not oppose it, thinking it reasonable, if his Clients were willing to comply; so after much disputing who should be Plaintiff and who Defendant, (for Mr. Marsh's Clients, out of a tender Regard to Mr. Mills, would not have him Defendant) it was agreed, that Mr. Highmore should be Plaintiff in one Action against Mr. Johnson, and Mr. Rich in another against Mr. Giffard; and that in order to put the Case as strong as possible, both the Defendant were to be admitted settled Inhabitants in the Parishes wherein they acted: But the greatest Dispute amongst the Counsel was, on what Words of the Act the Issue should be directed to try; Mr. Strange and the Counsel on that Side insisted on conforming to the Words of the Act, Rogues and Vagabonds; Mr. Marsh and Mr. Gill insisted that it should be Rogues or Vagabonds; that the Words should be taken disjunctively: Then Mr. Wynne propos'd, that the Words should be Rogues, Vagabonds, and Sturdy Beggars; Mr. Serjeant Darnell propos'd taking the Words as in the Summons as Vagrants, but Mr. Marsh and Mr. Gill still opposed that, and would not comply to any other Words than Rogues or Vagabonds; upon which Mr. Serjeant Darnell, &c. said, then the Summons must be dismiss'd; Mr. Marsh then reply'd it must, for it was wrong. Sir Thomas Clarges throughout the whole Affair behaved in so impartial and handsome a Manner, as did Honour to the Commission, and said, he thought the very Words of the Act should be taken; and that if he should send another Summons (but desired to be excused from the Affair) he would insert no other Words than Rogues and Vagabonds, according to the Act. And so the Summons was dismiss'd, and the Affair ended.

Lewes, Nov. 1. This Day the Gentlemen that are in the Interest of Sir Cecil Bishopp and Mr. Fuller, met at the Star, where they had the Pleasure of hearing (by the truest Accounts from all Parts) that the Interest of those two Gentlemen daily increases, tho' their Adversaries are continually giving out Reports to the contrary; and 'tis thought that in a little Time the Gentlemen that are Favourers of the Excise will be oblig'd to do what they at first said their Opponents must, viz. give it up without standing a Poll.

Dublin, Oct. 9. Yesterday the Right Hon. Thomas How, Esq; present Lord Mayor, declined standing Candidate to represent this City in Parliament, in the room of Alderman Burton, decea'd; whereupon Humphry French, Esq; late Lord Mayor, was declared duly elected, and carried to the Parliament House in a Chair, amidst the Acclamations of many Thousands of People.——On Saturday a Quarrel happened at the Election, wherein, after a desperate Skirmish, many were much hurt and wounded: The Victory issued in favour of Alderman French's Friends. In the Evening, on closing the Books, the Poll stood, for the Lord Mayor 613, for Alderman French 637, besides several Hundreds ready to poll for him, among them 30 Members of Parliament, and 100 Gentlemen of Distinction: At Night Bonfires were made throughout the City.

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 7.

On Monday Night last his Excellency the Count de Montijo, Ambassador-Extraordinary from his Catholick Majesty, received a Courier from his Court, and Yesterday had a private Audience of the King; wherein it is said he acquainted his Majesty with the King his Master's Resolution of sending some Troops, in Conjunction with those of his most Christian Majesty, against the Emperor's Dominions; with Assurances of his Majesty's good Friendship to his Royal Person and this Nation, and of the Sense he has of his Britannick Majesty's efficacious Offices to prevent the Rupture between the Court of Spain and that of Vienna.

It is also assured, that there will be speedily published his Catholick Majesty's Manifesto, full of the Motives of his Resolution against the Emperor, and of Securities about the Commerce, its great Advantages, and reciprocal good Amity between this Nation and Spain.

We hear his Majesty has been pleased to order 300 Tickets to be issued out by his Grace the Duke of Grafton, as a Present to the Right Hon. the Lord Mayor, to be distributed by his Lordship, to such of the Citizens or others, as his Lordship thinks fit, in order to their Admittance on the Wedding Day.

Several of the Silver Tassels belonging to the Canopy erected in the French Chapel at St. James's, have been taken off by Persons who resorted thither under Pretence of seeing the Magnificence of the Place, on which Account an express Order is given from Court for no Strangers to be admitted.

Yesterday one Roades stood on the Pillory at Temple-Bar, and met with as favourable a Reception, as he did last Saturday at Charing Cross.

The same Day Cornel de Romain's Servant was examin'd for the last Time by Justice Deveil, when she prevaricated more than she had done in her former Examinations, and denied the Facts, which she not only confess'd, but were prov'd upon her before, whereupon that Gentleman committed her to Newgate.

Several Additions having been made to the Nuptial Anthem, the Words are now as follow:

THIS is the day which the Lord has made, we will rejoice and be glad in it.

The king's daughter is all glorious within, her clothing is of wrought gold.

She shall be brought unto the king in raiment of needlework, the virgins her companions shall be brought unto thee.

With gladness and rejoicing shall they be brought.

Blessed is the man that has a virtuous wife, for the number of his days shall be double.

A good wife is a good portion, which shall be given in the portion of them that fear the Lord.

Strength and honour are her clothing, and she shall rejoice in time to come.

She opens her mouth with wisdom, and in her tongue is the law of kindness.

As the sun when it ariseth in the high heaven, so is the beauty of a good wife.

Her children arise up and call her blessed; her husband also, and he praiseth her.

Many daughters have done virtuously, but thou excellest them all.

We will remember thy name from one generation to another, therefore shall the people give praise unto thee, world without end. Amen.

Hallelujah. Amen.

THURSDAY, Nov. 8.

Yesterday about Twelve at Noon, his Highness the Prince of Orange arriv'd at Greenwich on board the Fubbs Yacht, attended by Horatio Walpole, Esq; who immediately dispatch'd one of his Majesty's Messengers to the Tower, to know if the proper Preparations were made there for the Reception of his Highness; and he returning with Advice, that the Lord Lovelace and Sir Clement Cotterel were waiting there to receive the Prince, and conduct him to Somerset-House, his Highness proceeded in one of his Majesty's Barges to the Tower, where he arriv'd about Three in the Afternoon. Before he landed, the Lord Lovelace went into the Barge, and complimented his Highness on his safe Arrival, which Compliment was return'd in a most gracious Manner. As soon as his Highness landed upon Tower-Wharf, he was receiv'd by the Governor of the Tower. Then his Highness was taken up in one of the King's Coaches, and conducted through the City, with loud Acclamations, to Somerset House, attended by the Lord Lovelace, Horatio Walpole, Esq; and Sir Clement Cotterel.

The Procession was begun by a Party of the Foot-Guards, who march'd before the Coach his Highness was in, afterwards came his Domesticks in several other Coaches, and laſtly the Coaches of the Peers and other Perſons of Diſtinction. As ſoon as the Prince alighted at Somerſet-Houſe, he was receiv'd by the Dukes of Montagu and Devonſhire, and ſeveral other Perſons of Diſtinction, who alſo had the Honour to dine with his Highneſs.

His Highneſs immediately notify'd his Arrival to the Royal Family, and preſently afterwards receiv'd the King's Compliments by his Grace the Duke of Grafton, and thoſe of the Queen by the Earl of Grantham; his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales ſent his by the Earl of Cholmondeley, and about Six in the Evening, Stephen Poyntz, Eſq; Governor to his Royal Highneſs the Duke, waited upon him with that Prince's Compliments alſo.

The Prince of Orange is attended hither with more than 70 Officers and Domeſticks.

Laſt Night on Account of his Highneſs the Prince of Orange's Arrival, the Priſoners on the Maſter-Side of the King's-Bench, made great Rejoicings by Illuminations, &c. and particularly by a large Paper Machine, in which were incloſed ſeveral Candles. The Machine was tranſparent, and upon the Sides were written the four following Lines,

Great is our Joy, let echoing Cannons roar,
Naſſau is landed on the Britiſh Shore.
William brought Peace, and Liberty reſtor'd;
We hope like Bleſſings Naſſau will afford.

The Perſon who brought the firſt News of the Prince's being ſeen off Margate, was one who keeps a publick Houſe there, who, upon ſeeing the Yachts, immediately took his Horſe and rode to Canterbury, where he took Poſt-Horſes, and came to St. James's at Eleven o'Clock on Monday Night. Her Majeſty ordered him twenty Guineas, and Sir Robert Walpole gave him five. The Twenty he has ſince laid out on a Silver Tankard, on which his Majeſty's Arms are engrav'd.

Yeſterday a Woman, well dreſs'd, croſſing the Way by the Glouceſter Tavern, the Upper-End of Pall-Mall, was unfortunately run over by a Hackney-Coach, whereby ſhe had one of her Legs broke, and was otherwiſe bruiſed in a terrible Manner.

The little Execution done by the Cannon of Fort Kehl upon the French Troops is not at all ſurprizing, for a Supply of Balls being at the ſame Time ſending to that Garriſon and the Fortreſs of Briſac, whoſe Guns are intirely of a different Calliber, thoſe deſign'd for one Place were thro' Miſtake carried to the other, ſo that the Governor could only fire Powder at the French, and frighten them with that as long as it laſted.

Many of the richeſt Planters of Barbadoes and the Sugar Iſlands are going to South-Carolina, to take up and ſettle Lands there with Part of their Stock of Negroes, in order to furniſh themſelves with ſuch Commodities and Proviſions from thence, as they uſed to have from New York, New England, and other Places. We are aſſur'd, that ſince the Crown purchas'd that Province, there has gone thither from Europe above 1500 new Settlers.

We hear that the Eccleſiaſtical Courts are about to proceed to give Sentence againſt a certain noble Lord, for a Contempt of their Citation to anſwer certain Complaints exhibited there.

Preferments. Capt. Tracey, Son to the late Judge Tracey, is promoted to the Poſt of a Lieutenant in the Foot-Guards.—— Capt. Bendiſh, late of General Gore's Dragoons, is promoted to the Command of a Company in General Sabine's Regiment of Foot, in the room of Capt Petit, who hath reſign'd.——Yeſterday came on the Election of a Steward for St. Thomas's Hoſpital, in the room of Mr. Samuel Gale, deceaſed; there were many Candidates, but Mr. James Brouſe, Citizen and Felt-maker, was choſen by a very great Majority.

Deaths. On Tueſday laſt died, at his Houſe near St. Thomas the Apoſtle's, Mr. Dixon, an eminent Merchant of this City.

Character of his Highneſs the Prince of Orange. Written by a Gentleman in Holland. Tranſlated from the French

HIS Highneſs inherited from King William III. of glorious Memory, as well as from the other Heroes whence he ſprung, Poſſeſſions, by which I chiefly mean Virtues, and thoſe of ſuch a Kind as are eaſier to admire than to imitate: Beſides, this is not properly the Place for a Panegyrick. A Homer only ſhould draw the Character of a Deity, and an Apelles the Picture of an Alexander. My Elogium of his Highneſs would be vaſtly too faint, ſhould I repreſent him endow'd with the ſeveral Qualities which only can unite in thoſe who are born to command: Should I take Notice of that gracious Air, that engaging Carriage, that lively, penetrating, and delicate Genius; of that juſt Diſcernment, that ſolid Judgment; that Diſpoſition which ranks him in the Number of thoſe happy Spirits, who never meet with the leaſt Obſtacle to Virtue; of thoſe generous Sentiments; that Frame of Mind ſo obliging, ſo courteous and compaſſionate: Great without Oſtentation, elevated without Pride, polite without Affectation; undiſguiſed, open, and ſincere; dear to all who have the Honour of knowing him, and ador'd by thoſe who have Acceſs to his Perſon. But let me not ſully the Beauty of his Character; my Pencil is too weak. The Author of an inimitable Work would not have ſhadow'd Mirevra under the Figure of Mentor, in order to form his Hero, had he known that a Prince, like to him who is our preſent Theme, would, by his illuſtrious Blood, by the vigilant Care, and the excellent Education which the Princeſs his Mother gave him, have ſhewn himſelf in Reality, what that incomparable Author drew only an ideal Picture of, in his Telemachus.

FRIDAY, Nov. 9.

Yeſterday at Noon the Right Hon. the Lord Chancellor, and all the Foreign Ambaſſadors, waited on his Highneſs the Prince of Orange, to compliment him on his Arrival in England. About Two, his Highneſs, conducted by Sir Clement Cottrel, Maſter of the Ceremonies, went to St. James's in one of his Majeſty's Coaches, and was receiv'd upon the Stair-Caſe by the Dukes of Grafton, Montagu, Newcaſtle and Richmond, and Sir Robert Walpole, after which he was conducted by the Lord Chamberlain to the King's Apartment, where his Majeſty receiv'd him in a moſt tender and affectionate Manner; his Highneſs was afterwards conducted by the Earl of Grantham, attended by ſeveral Perſons of Quality, to her Majeſty's Apartment, where he was introduc'd to the Queen, the Princeſs Royal, and the other Princeſſes; his Highneſs was afterwards conducted by Sir Clement Cottrel to his Royal Highneſs the Prince of Wales, and then to the Duke, to whom having paid his Compliments, he came back to the Queen's Apartments, and ſtaid till about half an Hour after Three, when he return'd to Somerſet Houſe. The ſame Day the Dukes of Grafton, Montagu, Newcaſtle and Devonſhire, had the Honour to dine with his Highneſs; and between Six and Seven at Night, his Highneſs went incognito to St. James's, and ſupp'd with their Majeſties and the Royal Family, and return'd to Somerſet Houſe between Eleven and Twelve.

Great Preparations are making by Henry Vander Eſch, Eſq; Deputy Warden of the Mint, one of his Majeſty's Juſtices of the Peace for the Tower Liberty, and Head-Keeper of Ludgate, by illuminating the ſaid Gate on both Sides with upwards of 1500 Lights, on the Evening of the Day that the Nuptials between his Highneſs and the Princeſs Royal are ſolemnized. On the Top of the ſaid Gate will be play'd off a great Number of fine Fireworks of curious Devices; when the Healths of their Majeſties, the Prince of Orange, and his Royal Conſort will be drank, under the Diſcharge of ſeveral ſmall Pieces of Cannon.

We are aſſur'd by undoubted Authority, that Thurſday next, and not before, is fixed for ſolemnizing the Nuptials of her Royal Highneſs the Princeſs Royal with the Prince of Orange.

His Highneſs gave 100 Guineas to the Mariners of the Fubbs Yacht which brought him over, and made a Preſent of a rich Diamond Ring to Sir Charles Haray.
